

Who is driving the change?

You are not alone,
but part of a climate
referendum team!

You.

Across Germany, small, effective teams are initiating the transformation to climate neutrality by 2035 at the latest. They are using sociopolitical methods to shape the future of their communities and districts.

Supported by GermanZero, each climate referendum team develops strategies specifically for the local situation. The toolbox of methods ranges from collecting signatures for a citizens' petition to talks with local administration and politics. Recently, more and more concrete implementation projects have been added.

Climate referendums are a particularly effective form of volunteer engagement. In the first two years, the teams achieved 23 official resolutions for climate neutrality and initiated four climate citizen councils. Many became partners with local politicians and administrators in planning and implementing concrete measures.

Sure!

Become climate neutral? But how can that be done?

LocalZero shows
you the way.

The free tool "LocalZero" generates a climate vision individually for your region in Germany. In 30 seconds you get an overview plan for a possible path to climate neutrality for your village, city or county.

This plan shows which measures and investments will make your region climate neutral. Based on public data from industry, agriculture, energy sector, building census and more, LocalZero calculates a 1.5° compatible path for you.
